A COCKNEY ON LONDON SUNSHINE. I often wonder if there will ever be a London Chaude Lorraine. If there ever be, he will, for the first thing, paint London Sun-shine, out of whose radiance I have just come from St. Martin's lane into my dark chamber, as a man comes from a morning bath in the molten gold of the sea with the sun on it, to re-dress himself before breakfast in the soft darkness of a Marine Parade room with the blind down. Sunshine through spring weeds is a delicious thing, so is sunshine through three feet of June grass, fit for mowing, when the thick flowers close like waves over your face as you lie on your back and listen to the lark that the angels are calling to, from that hollow snow-ball of a cloud.— But as we have none of these delights, and are all built in for various terms of imprisonment in long defiles of houses, walled all round with black and brown brick, eaged under miles of red tile roof, in streets where the chimneys keep telegraphing to each other by smoke signals, at windows where consumptive geraniums sicken for fresher air, and no thin weed dares to take root between the joints of the bricks from Pharoah's hard brick-yard, where flowers are curiosities, and the hot dark breath of Cares kiln's and furnaces thickens the smiling air, which struggles to be bright and free, let us make the

Talk of your mountain distance, your sir perspectives. I never saw anything in the blue gaps of the Apennines more fairy beautiful than the blue grey fog that turns the end of a London street as you look down in it into mystery and beauty, that gives the present a tinge of the uncertanty of the future and the past, and throws a halo of poetry over Gower street or Soho. And look now how the London sunshine falls on a white luminous veil, such as hid the face of Moses, before that vulgar block of houses in Blue Ruin street; two pawn-brokers, a publican's and an undertaker's. That white fog of glory slants across the end of the street, where the cab No 3173 is breaking through it, like a new Jacob's ladder, the cords, golden threads of sunbeams, let down in gracious mercy once more to allow some poor suffering life-burdened wretch to crawl up it to the Bright City. Why it is a complete angelic exhibition, and should be charged for. It is worth a guinea a seat, yet no one looks up, no one but that poor little skeleton girl with a frozen bunch of yesterday's water cresses in her lean hand, who haddles in the doorway of Lattat, the sharp attorney, who (brute) is, actually as I speak, tapping at the glass to bid her go away. See, too, you pur-blind artist with the microscope eyes, who can find nothing to paint in this our dear Londonthe darker bar that strikes like a giant's sword blade through the great woof of cobweb sunshine we speak of—can't imagine where it comes from? Oh, Macguelp, thou mole eyed misuser of unpaid pigments, dost thou not see that it is the shadow of the chimney above us, which standing in the way of the royal blessed purifying sunshine that brings hope and gladness into the very eyes of the dying. enfeebles and dims that path of darkness. Talk of Samarcand and your Chinese spleudor. Is it not gorgeous to see how the sunshine glistens on those great old letters, "Bar-clay, Perkius & Co.," that are heraldically displayed on the great board above the publican's (Druggel's) garret window at the "Fivealls," and makes them shine like letters hewn in the solid bullion? - Charles Dickens.

THE EDUCATION MOST NEEDED.

Learn to Labor .- The question is often asked, why is it that so few people are successful in business, and why property finds such an unequal distribution? This say, received the advantages of a good English education, and that man was educated at one of our best colleges. Both have been industrious, honest, and economical, and yet neither of them has been successful in business. Why is it? asks the New York Express; and that journal proceeds to point out the cause, and in the course of its remarks

The idea too commonly prevails that a mere knowledge of books is the beginning and ending of education. The sons and daughters, especially of the rich, grow up with this notion in their heads, in idleness, as it were, with little idea of the responsibilities which await them. Their natures revolt at the mention of "labor," not dreaming that their parents before them obtained the wealth they are so proud of by industry and economy. How many young men, college bred though they may be, are prepared to manage the estates which their fathers possessed, and which it may have required a lifetime to acquire? How many young women, though having acquired all the knowledge and graces of the best schools, know how to do what their mothers. how to do what their mothers have done before them, and which the daughters may yet be compelled to do at at some period of their lives? The children of the poor have to labor or starve, and as far as that goes they are educated to be practical.

The education that scoffs at labor and encourages idleness is the worst enemy for a girl, man, or woman. Instead of ennobling, it degrades; it opens up the road to ruin.— The education which directs us to do what we are fitted to do, that respects labor, that inculcates industry, honesty, and fair dealing, and strips us of selfishness, is the education we do need, and which must become the prevailing system of the country before we can be as a people either happy or prosperous.

FOR THE CAMP MEETING .- The un dersigned having consented to take a company to the Fairfax Camp Meeting, to commence on the 19th inst., will be assisted by James M. Benton. Persons intending to join the company and board with us, will leave their names with Mr. Wm. N. Berkley, or the undersigned, at as early a day as practicable, that we may make our arrangements accordingly. [ang 10-5t*] J. H. MONROE.
